2. The petitioner says that her husband was specially deputed ~~to this~~ plague duty and that he died of plague "caught by having the infected sick patient in the Chamarajnagar Police Station alone". Under art: 394 of the M. S. Regns, if a police officer dies of plague contracted in the execution of his duties in plague-stricken localities and if his duties were such as to force him into a position entailing imminent risk of infection his family is entitled to an extraordinary pension. In the present case, the Dy Commr of the Mysore Dt has reported in his letter No. 369 dt 21-1-07 to the I. G of Police in Mysore that the petitioner's husband prior to catching infection, was patrolling the town of Chamarajnagar which was infected, and had to visit the plague patients during his rounds so as to render assistance to them and that he was therefore obliged to run the imminent risk of catching infection while in the execution of his duty.

Subject.

Petition of Kulsoom Bi, widow of the late Sheik Fareed, Police Lance Duffedar of Chamarajanagar Taluk for the grant of an extraordinary pension to her [illegible] appears to me to be a hard case more particularly in view of the fact that the circumstances of the L.Duffedar's death would seem to bring his case within the scope of the principles laid down. The Comptroller in his Memo of the 24th July 1906 laid it down that there should be "some act which brought them in direct contact with infection, to justify the grant of extraordinary pension". Again in the Comptroller's letter no 409 of the 16th December 1905 it is stated that it must be proved beyond doubt that death was a natural consequence of the discharge of duties involving imminent risk and known positively to exist before entering upon the discharge of such duties [illegible]

3327-Pen 350

The reports of the I.G.P and the D.S.P. show conclusively that the man was employed on duty which absolutely brings his case within the terms of these principles, if words have any meaning at all, viz: the patrolling of an infected town and giving the ordinary assistance which is required from the police in connection with plague and which includes the assisting of plague patients. Yet the claim was rejected. To require absolute proof of the actual means by which the man who died of plague contracted the infection is to ask for an impossibility. It would imply the personal identification of the flea that conveyed the virus.

I shall be obliged if the Person and Council will reconsider the specific case, and also the principles on which such pensions are to be granted and submit their recommendations to me. As the I.G.P points out, Police subordinates are exposed without any choice to grave risks at times of plague epidemics and it is only just that the rules, which govern the grant of gratuities or pension in the case of their death, should be framed in an and administered an equitable and reasonable spirit.

Art: 394 of the Mysore Service Regulations prescribes as follows:—
If a person employed in the Service of Govt dies in the performance of a duty which is attended with extraordinary bodily risk his family is entitled to one extraordinary pension. To give an idea of duties attended with extra-ordinary bodily risk, the following examples of cases of ordinary accident are given:— A policeman falling from a horse; a policeman on escort duty killed by sunstroke, a lascar killed by the snapping of a hawser; a labourer falling under a burden. From these it appears that the duties should be such as in the performance of which risk positively exists and escape is providential. On this principle, the following provision has been made with regard to policemen dying of plague.

"But a policeman who dies of "plague contracted in the execu"-tion of his duties in plague-
"stricken localities, may be "considered as having been "~~killed~~ killed in the performance
"of a duty attended with "extraordinary bodily risk, pro"-vided that the duties (whether "ordinary or connected with

Serial No.

"plague) of the deceased person ... such as to force him into a position entailing imminent risk of infection"

And it is to this principle that in letter No. 3327-Pen: 350 dt: the 16th Decr 05 the late Lamented Mr N. G. Basu invites attention and solicits strict adherence. This stands the principle.

2. It is only in the application of this principle that difficulties arise. All policemen dying of plague cannot, as a rule give rise to a claim for extraordinary pension. Do their duties differ? As for example, (1) One is an officer patrolling an infected area, (2) another rendering help to sick patients, (3) a third removing dead bodies, (4) a fourth assisting in the disinfection of infected houses, (5) a fifth living in the infected area exposed to the danger as every other human being and controlling the whole staff of policemen and so on. Of these, it is only in the cases of those whose duties are exposed to positive risk X that an entry pension can be granted. As a guide to the application of this principle, the following note has been ~~made~~ added to the art: 394 of the Mysore Service Regulations:—

Serial No.

"It should be observed that this "rule being based upon the ana- "-logy of the Regulations for the "grant of pensions to soldiers "wounded and to the families "of soldiers killed in action, "the Govt is compelled strictly "to limit its application to "the cases for which it is "intended to provide; and "moreover, that it is obviously "inexpedient for the Govt to "dispense charity in indi- "-vidual cases, or to do any- "-thing which might weaken "the inducements to officers "to secure proper provision for their

The requirements of Article 394 are: (1) that the deceased must have been engaged on a duty (whether ordinary or connected with plague) attended with extraordinary bodily risk, in the sense of forcing him into a position entailing imminent risk of infection.
(2) that death must have ensued

Serial No.

in the performance of such duty, and not merely as the result of an accident.

In the present case, the petitio er's deceased husband was engaged in patrolling an infected locality and visiti and rendering help to plague patients during his rounds.
The duty evidently was one which faced the man into a position
"entailing imminent risk of infection." He himself caug the infection in the performance of such duty, and died as a result thereof; there is nothing in the facts reported to suggest that infection was accidental or d to the neglect of ~~obvious~~ pre cautions. The case therefore falls clearly within the scope of Article 394, and allowa extraordinary pension being

As directed by His Highness in order date th May 1908, the question of the grant of an extra ordinary pension to Kulsambi, widow of Shek Farid, ance Duffedar, Chamarajnagar Taluk, who died of lague while in the execution of his duty, and the rinciples on which such pensions are to be granted have been further considered.

In the specific case under reference, it clear that the deceased Duffedar was deputed on pla duty, that he was visiting infected houses and rend ing help to plague patients, and that he caught the infection in the performance of such duty. The Assistant Secretary, Financial Branch, and the late Financial Secretary, Mr. Majumdar, were of opinion that the case did not fall under Article 394 of the Service Regulations, and the Second Councillor by w the case was disposed of, accepted their opinion. now considers that "the view of the case taken by Messrs. M.N. Krishna Rao and Majumdar and concurred in by him is not borne out by facts since ascertain and thinks that an extraordinary pension may be gra ed to the widow of the deceased Duffedar.

The First Councillor concurs in this view

I am of opinion that a pension is clearly admissible under Article 394 of the Service Regulations, and will, if approved, sanction a pension eq to half the pay of the deceased, under Article 401 (iii).

As regards the principles on which such pensions are to be granted, I would invite a reference to the Secretary's note of the 16th instant. As pointed out by the Secretary, the Mysore rule is based on the rule obtaining in British India and is sufficient to meet all cases like the present in which the duty performed is one of extraordinary bodily risk. The rule is all right and requires no amendment. What is wanted is a fair and reasonable application of the spirit of the rule to cases actually arising.

Both the Councillors agree that the rule does not require amendment. I agree in this view. The decision in the present case will ensure a more liberal application of the rule in future.
